Many complimentary remarks are being heard on every hand with reference to the progressiveness and liberality on the part of the News-Bulletin in offering a brand new Overland Four five-passenger touring car worth $960 and other prizes in keeping with the liberal lines on which this enterprise has been drawn. The contest is just starting and comes to a close Saturday night, December 20--about six weeks from today.

The undertaking, while colossal in a way, has met with instantaneous favor in the eyes of the newspaper reading public, and if the advance interest manifested be taken as a criterion the venture is already an assured success. Never before in this section of the state has there been a contest of such magnitude, and where the time was so good and the conditions so easy and so the one just announced by the News-Bulletin.

Overland is Big Feature. The contest is a big feature and a big prize. It is a contest for a brand new Overland Four touring car, worth $960.00, a free vacation trip to Colorado, a $200 Brooks Phonograph, and a wealth of other prizes. The contest is just starting and comes to a close Saturday night, December 20--about six weeks from today. The undertaking, while colossal in a way, has met with instantaneous favor in the eyes of the newspaper reading public, and if the advance interest manifested be taken as a criterion the venture is already an assured success. Never before in this section of the state has there been a contest of such magnitude, and where the time was so good and the conditions so easy and so the one just announced by the News-Bulletin.

And can you imagine anything more alluring than a free vacation trip to Colorado--or a place equi-distant--the second grand prize? Think of being able to spend a vacation in any of the innumerable mountain resorts of the Rockies, to view at first hand the wonders and glories of the Great Golden West; or, perhaps, you would rather take in Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou or elsewhere in that region? Choose the place you want to go and the News-Bulletin will foot the bill. The third grand prize, that $200 Brooks automatic repeating phonograph, purchased from and on exhibition at the H. C. Vogt general store, Tinley Park, is a prize worth the efforts of seven weeks' spare time work of anyone. Then, too, there are those cash prizes--$100 amounts to purchase something you have wanted long, and sums sufficient to warrant any effort they might take to secure.

NOR IS THAT ALL: Any participant who remains actively in the contest to the end, making regular weekly cash reports, but fails to win one of the prizes offered, will be paid a cash commission of 20 per cent (one dollar in every five) of their total collections. This arrangement insures compensation to all active competitors, and means that there will be no losers in this race.

Object of This Campaign.

The object of this campaign is, of course, to secure new and renewal subscriptions to the News-Bulletin, and in order to secure this end quickly and advantageously, the handsomest collection of prizes ever offered locally has been made ready for distribution among those who participate most heartily. Therefore, every wideawake person is offered an unparalleled opportunity to profit, and in a big way, through their spare time during the next few weeks. So, it is a plan that works both ways.

First List of Entries.

By looking over the list of entries as they appear today it will be noted that a number of the best known and most enterprising people of Mokena, surrounding towns and communities have signified their intention of entering the race for the valuable prizes offered. However, there is plenty of room for more hustlers; in fact, the opportunity exists for live-wire workers to enter the race and make themselves important factors and probable winners of the valuable prizes is actually calling aloud. So get in the race at once and go after that Overland touring car. There are quite a large number of nominations sent, but not included in this list. In each case the nominee has been notified by letter and requested to return the "inclosed nomination blank." It is expected that some of those will be heard from by an early mail and that next Thursday's list will see new names added and the interest growing by leaps and bounds.

Call and Get Acquainted.

The Campaign Manager, located in the business office of the News-Bulletin, will gladly furnish you with detailed information regarding this big prize distribution. Call today and talk the matter over with him in person. He will assist you in every legitimate way to win. If not convenient to call, telephone or write this office and a representative will be sent.

Enter your name today and win the Overland touring car for a Christmas present.

FRANKFORT HAS SOME CAKE; 25 EGGS REQUIRED

Frankfort, Nov. 6.--The store of Otto Herschbach was the scene of a very interesting demonstration Friday, which attracted a very large crowd to the store. For the past week a demonstrator for the Copper Clad Range Co., of St. Louis, has been demonstrating the "backpacker" and "hunger" cakes. On Friday night Mr. Helen, the demonstrator, baked a huge cake in one of these ranges. The cake was two feet square and consisted of five layers. Twenty-five eggs and five pounds of sugar besides a large quantity of other ingredients went into the making of this cake. After the cake was baked Mr. Phelan placed two boards across the top of the cake and asked 24 of the women spectators to step on these boards, which they did. The combined weight squeezed the cake as flat as a pancake. Soon as the women stepped off the boards and the boards were removed the cake rose up again to the same height it was when it first came out of the oven. The cake was then cut up and divided between the crowd to show that the cake was palatable, and it was relished. Following is the recipe for making this wonderful cake, but of course this recipe is only for a cake for the average-sized family, but the same kind of ingredients enter into it as in the monster cake:

To five eggs beaten well add three-fourths of a pound of sugar, three-fourths pint of sweet milk, flavor to suit taste (any kind of flavoring can be used), one fourth of a pound of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. When flour is half mixed with first mixture, add four tablespoonfuls melted lard or butter (not hot) and bake for 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Biscuits made of wheat and alfalfa flour were also baked and given for free lunch to show the baking qualities of the stove. Mr. Herschbach's sale on this range was far beyond his expectations and this is hardly to be wondered at when the effective demonstrations conducted by Mr. Phelan convincingly showed the excellent points of the range.

PLAN THANKSGIVING DANCE.

The Frankfort Hall Co. is preparing for their winter dances. The first dance of the season is planned for Thanksgiving to be held at the Hall Company's hall.

HEAR ISSUES DISCUSSED.

A big political rally was held Thursday night at the Frankfort hall. The issues in the coming election were clearly defined to the voters present. The speakers pointed out the great importance of sending the proper men to the constitutional convention so that the interests of all of the people and not of a certain class will be conserved.

TINLEY PARK FARMER GOING AFTER THIEVES

Tinley Park, Nov. 6.--John Bettenhausen reports that thieves have been making some costly raids on his farm of late. In addition to stealing many chickens the thieves have hauled off over 125 bushels of wheat besides other grain. Mr. Bettenhausen has been unable to get a clue to the thieves and now offers $500 reward to anyone who will give him information leading to the arrest of such thief or thieves or to any one who catches anyone stealing things on his farm.

BUILDING ADDITIONAL STORY

The Montana Tractor Co., which took over the old Spiral Wash Machine plant, is having considerable remodeling work done on the plant. A portion of the north wing has been unroofed preparatory to building another story which is to house the mechanical part of the plant and the main offices. Just how soon the firm will start manufacturing the tractors has not been announced. From all appearances this will be a going concern. The Tinley Park people are eagerly awaiting developments as it will mean much to this village to have a live manufacturing plant here.

Mr. Albert, who received a telegram Friday from his son Albert abroad, the latter's arrival in San Francisco from Siberia where he had been with the American forces for some time. It is understood Albert is in poor health.

Miss Eleanor Funk, assisted by a number of her girl friends who are attending the Blue Island High School, gave a Halloween party at the Woodmen hall Friday night. The guests were attired in various Halloween costumes and all kinds of Halloween games were played. All enjoyed a most jolly evening.

The drive which has been going on under the direction of the Zion Lutheran church for the collection of clothing for the relief of the suffering Lutherans in Poland has been very successful. In all about 150 pounds of clothing has been collected. Rev. A. Buddenhagen shipped the goods to headquarters Monday.

HEAVY ON SPUDS.

Tinley Park and surrounding territory is evidently heavy on potato eating. Six carloads of potatoes have been sold already with still more coming in. Wm. Malhotra sold a carload Monday.

SURPRISE ON BIRTHDAY.

A large company of relatives and friends sprung a surprise party on Henry Bormet Sunday night in honor of his birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in playing all kinds of games, music, etc. About midnight a big supper was served to sixty guests. All enjoyed a most delightful evening and wish Mr. Bormet many more similar occasions.

HALLOWEEN IMPS SWIPE FOOD AT CHURCH PARTY

Mokena, Nov. 6.--The Halloween spirits were quite active Friday night and their exertions evidently made them very hungry for they showed quite a keen appetite at the Mokena hall when they devoured a huge trayful of ham sandwiches and refreshments.

The Young People's society of the St. John's Evangelical church was entertaining its members at a Halloween party when a commotion was heard in front of the hall. Upon trying to hurry out the front door to see what was up the guests found the doors locked. Later on when the young ladies went to the basement to get the refreshments they found a sight which made their spirits sink. The refreshments had disappeared. But this was not all. The Halloween spirits had deliberately torn the sandwiches to pieces and scattered them over the basement floor and stepped on them. It was discovered that entrance had been gained through a window and the refreshments carted away while the guests were attempting to open the locked doors in front of the hall to see what the commotion in the street was about. Buns and boiled ham were found scattered in the mud cakes had been bled out of the hall, but luckily they had not been removed to the basement and were saved from the ravages of the Halloween spirits. Considerable indignation was expressed at the wanton destruction of the food, some people saying it is a pity that we have so much food in this country that we can waste it while across the seas many thousands of human beings are starving for the want of it.

A COMMUNICATION

Editor News-Bulletin:

A group of hungry boys and girls surrounded the Mokena Hall last Friday night, October 31st, inside all was gayety and laughter. The "Blues" were entertaining the "Reds" at a Halloween party. The crowd sneaked to the back door, poor, hungry boys and girls--if they had only known the League would have taken them into their circle--but they did not know. Ah! the basement door was open. In went a brave lad, or was it two or three? Behold, what a sight! Twelve dozen buns neatly battered, and filled with delicious veal loaf. Oh! how good they looked. Did the lads think twice?

They grabbed the box and ran, spilling half of the buns over the basement floor getting them dirty, but of course they could not eat those, they could be left for the League members.

For shame, that Mokena should have in her midst hungry boys and girls whom must needs go to Halloween parties and run off with the food. Is there no one who will feed them?

Dear boys and girls of that group, the League also had delicious cakes, coffee, pickles besides all those sandwiches and they would have rejoiced to feed you, for that is their great and good work--doing for others.

MOSUL and NINEVEH

Scene in Mosul.

THE most important feature about Mosul, which is beginning to show the beneficial effects of British control, is its geographical situation. Mosul is the meeting point of roads and caravan routes from everywhere. They wind in through the mountain passes and over the rocky highland from Diarbekr and Bitlis, across the great desert from Aleppo and over the sands from Persia and Bagdad. Its very name, "the place of connection," tells its story. And as with roads and caravan routes, so it will be, some time again in the future in the matter of railways, when the famous Bagdad line is completed, says the Christian Science Monitor. At present Germany's great effort falls short of Mosul by many miles in the west and in the south, and the "ramshackle city," as it has been irreverently called, still depends for its communications on the road and the caravan route as it has done through the ages.

Of all the cities in the Turkish empire, as one writer has well said of it, perhaps Mosul is the one that has been least touched by western civilization. Built on ground that once was a suburb of Nineveh, it stands on the western bank of the Tigris, looking across at the mounds which are all that remain of the glories of the capital of ancient Assyria. Nineveh has a history that stretches throughout a period nearly two thousand years long, ending with the fall of the empire of Sennacherib about the year 600 B. C.

Mosul's Many Storks.

The old town, with its strangely narrow streets, even for the east, is surrounded by a half-ruined wall, built in modern times as a protection against the Shammar Arabs. Every one remarks on the narrow streets of Mosul, on its white, crumbling houses, on the gypsum dust which falls constantly from the walls over everything, and upon the storks. Indeed the storks of Mosul are apparently its most remarkable feature.

Discussing the matter one authority tells how, in the cool of the evening, the citizens of Mosul share their housetops with innumerable storks, who build their ragged nests on the highest places "in utter disregard of the laws of gravity." Four great, preposterous specimens of the species stood, in the early morning, on a wall beside the room where he was, he continues, and he dimly realized that they were performing their morning toilet. They took no notice of him. But a loud noise like someone rattling a stick in a wooden bucket attracted his attention. Then somebody else with another bucket made a similar noise in a different key, and he wondered what in the world could they be doing to the buckets. Then it dawned upon him that half the population of Mosul must be rattling buckets, for the sound came from far and near, faint or loud according to distance, and in a hundred different keys. Then came a loud rattle close beside him. "Within nine feet of him," he says,

"stood a solemn stork, the toilet over, his attitude of graceful balance on one leg. The noise which I had heard from all over the city came straight from his beak, the hollow upper and lower halves of which he was striking together with incredible rapidity."

In the Bazaars and Square.

The bazaars of Mosul are not the attractive places they might be expected to be in a city of so much traffic. As William Warfield says in his book "The Case of Assyria," they are rarely roofed, and are full of the commonest wares. Keepers are generally Christians; there are many Arabs. Garden produce is often sold in the squares and markets, and at any time vendors may be seen talking in the street with eggs or cucumbers in a basket, while the mosque courtyards are favored places for sweetmeat sellers, who display "Turkish delight" on scalloped copper trays. The bazaars radiate from a picturesque square quite near the bridge, which is the center of the town. To the south and southwest are the drapers, shoemakers and harness makers; to the northwest the greengrocers, while the potters and dealers in hardware are to be found in narrow stores opening on a street that runs to the north.

As to the square itself, it is, of course, one of the famous meeting places of Mosul. Here the caravans are gathered together, and their owners sit on the famous second-story gallery of a coffee shop, while the muleteers stroll about the crowded place, or lounge among bales covered with brown and white striped sackcloth. These men are almost always Kurds, those from the southern and eastern tribes dressed in tunics, zouave jackets and turbans. They wear baggy trousers reaching to their feet,

Site of Ancient Nineveh.

For many people the great attraction of a visit to Mosul, the most inaccessible place in the sultan's dominion, lies across the famous "bridge of boats" at the other side of the Tigris, where the huge, formless mounds, rising up out of the sand, mark the site of the ancient city of Nineveh. Any attempt to tell the story of Nineveh would involve a journey back to the very beginning of things. Later Assyrian writers declare with confidence that its story ran back as a matter of course to the "creation of the world," but, as a matter of fact, the first firm ground in the midst of tradition is reached about the year 2200 B. C. That wonderfully vivid period in Nineveh's history with which the world, especially recently, has become familiar, lies between the ninth and sixth centuries B. C. In this period the reign of Sennacherib is of course by far the most important.

Nineveh, however, depended entirely for its greatness and power upon the conquering spirit of its rulers and the military glory and powers of its armies, and when these were ultimately defeated the city fell, never to rise again, and its very site was quickly forgotten among the nations.

COAT SEASON IS BIG PARIS CARD

Sometimes it is the separate dress and coat and sometimes it is the suit that holds the sway of style during a season. In Paris, without a doubt, declares a fashion writer, it is the coat this season.

Such attention as has been shown to morning and afternoon dresses in Paris would be hard to equal, and instead of their having declined in popularity after several seasons of attention, quite the contrary has happened. They are more in the limelight than ever.

In spite of the fact that there is so little conspicuous change in the line

Not so much hand work is to be seen about these dresses as was the case in former seasons. The little girls who used to do this work have learned by their connection with the war-time munition factories that a female is entitled to more of daily sustenance than it was possible for her to attain by doing embroidery. So the new frocks show the strain. But the Parisian designer gives us something quite as lovely even though it has but one-fourth its former embroidery for adornment, yes, even though there be no hand work at all and the decoration is found to be a product of the good old American machine. Rows of braid and bits of bright ribbon do their part in producing an attractive effect.

Leather Frocks and Trimmings.

A trimming that has taken first rank is leather. It is handled in unheard-of ways and the result is charming. Sometimes it is a narrow strip of belt colored in a happy contrast to a gown. Again it is used as satin would be for outside facing on cuffs and skirt pockets. Sometimes it is pieced into an all-over pattern and sometimes it is gotten up into whole suits. An extravagant suit was made of pink leather and trimmed with a high collar of fuzzy black fur. Then there was an attractive gown of white leather in the cut pattern. This was trimmed with rows of black nail heads and some strips of black patent leather. It, too, was bizarre but attractive, perhaps a thing more for Paris than for an American city.

While the sleeves on most of these dresses for day wear are short—often extremely short—they are time and of the gowns, it is upon these "little dresses" that some of the most artistic touches have been lavished. The inconspicuous, unassuming gown for morning or for afternoon can have about it much genuine feeling. At each of the couturiers the same story is true; each one has outdone himself in presenting new reasons for the continued life of this popular garment.

Materials have for their leader one that has the sanction of ages behind it—blue serge. Then there are all of the soft surfaced fabrics—duvetyne, rusella, burella, and the allied fabrics. For afternoon there are charmeuse, of which there are a great many models to be seen, taffeta, and velvet which has lost none of its vogue. There was nothing smarter than a black velvet gown and there is nothing smarter now.

The trimmings and touches on these dresses for daylight wear are fascinating in their variety. It is not so much the thing that is done as the way it is done. When one sees the clever little bits of hand-made braid and the inserts of bead work, the facings and the edgings, one wonders how there can grow so many new ideas in the course of a single season. But there they are, to be copied indifferently by less ingenious Americans.

Blue Chiffon, Blue Leather

By way of using two materials showing as great a contrast as it was possible to obtain one designer showed a frock made of dark blue chiffon with dark blue leather (or kid) trimmings. You will wonder, if you have not seen it, how this could possibly be and what would be the effect produced. Well, it was as pretty as anything that could be imagined. The leather was used as a wide edging for the full peplum and it was worked into the bodice as well as making cuffs on the ends of the flowing sleeves. Not a little of the charm of this gown lay in the fact that the whole was built over a lavender foundation.

Some of the neck lines on the new fall gowns are interesting because they are quite different from anything we have seen for some time. I mean those which are cut in a V and which are finished with frilled or shaped collars standing up quite high at the back of the neck, graduating in width as they reach the front, and gradually tapering off into nothing in a point again trimmed or finished with flowing cuffs which give an interesting line to the silhouette. The cuffs are set onto three-quarters or half-length sleeves, and sometimes they even finish, in a thoroughly well done manner, the ends of sleeves that are of the shortest.

Fur is used sparingly on frocks of any sort. When it is seen there is apt to be narrow strips of it used as though they might be strips of embroidery. For this purpose moleskin is popular, while kolinsky and seal come in for their usual attention.

THE WEIGHT OF RESULTS

If you read some wealthy claim, you always ask: Do any results prove this claim? Because our results afford the proof. Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine is the best remedy for all stomach troubles. That is our claim. And here are the results: "Weston, Neb., Aug. 24, 1919. Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine is the best stomach remedy. It acts wonderfully. Fr. Pacula." Triner's Angelica Tonic is unequalled as a restorer of vitality and energy. Read the following: "Balkston Spa, N. Y., Aug. 19, 1919. Triner's Angelica is excellent. It helps digestion, gives healthy sleep and invigorates the blood. My wife has suffered from colds for 7 years, but now Triner's Angelica helped her. Mich. Miller." Every druggist has these remedies in stock. SCRAPS OF HUMOR

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

A party of Americans was being conducted over the ancient abbey in one of our famous old towns. The learned attendant pointed out the ages of the various parts, and referring to one arch in particular, said, "That arch may possibly go back to William the Conqueror."

"Don't you like it?" promptly asked one of the sightseers.

The attendant signified that he did not understand.

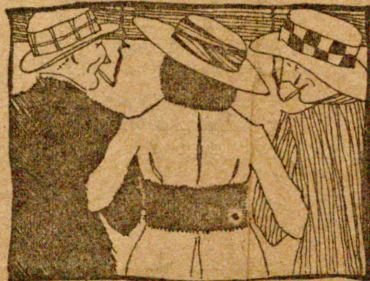

"Well, why are you sending it back, anyway?" was the reply. "Don't it suit you?"—London Tit-Bits.

Something.

Running No Chances.

Wifey—You knew I had friends coming to the house this evening. What do you mean by coming home an hour after they've all gone? Hubby—I wanted to be sure they'd all left.

BIFF!

Stop jolting Liver and Bowels with violent drugs, but take "Cascarets."

"Dynamiting" bile out of your system with calomel and other sickening purgatives is all wrong. Salts, Oil, and Cathartic Waters act by flooding the bowels with the digestive juices which are vital to the stomach. Cascarets are different. They act as a tonic to the bowel muscles, which is the only sensible way to relieve a bilious attack, a sour, acid stomach, or constipated bowels. There is no griping or inconvenience. You naturally return to regularity and cheerfulness. Cascarets cost very little and they work while you sleep.—Adv.

Matteson

Matteson, Nov. 6.—George Von Berge arrived Saturday from Minot, N. D. He expects to visit here with relatives for some time. Mr. Von Berge said he was surprised to find such pleasant weather here, for when he left Minot Thursday a fierce blizzard was raging. He reports a very poor crop the past season. He got 140 bushels of wheat from 40 acres. Wheat has been averaging six to eight bushels per acre. Oats ran a little better, from 10 to 12 bushels, and rye ran about the same. Lack of rain is the cause of the crop failure. Crops were standing pretty good in June, but when the hot winds came and no rain followed the crop was burned up in a few days. Farmers do not bother with the straw but burn it up. No hay was raised to amount to anything and the cattle-feeding problem is a serious one. Horses have barely any value, selling from $15 up to $75 per head. The very best horses do not sell for more than $100 per head.

Public sales are poorly attended as the farmers feel they cannot afford to add more to their already heavy burdens.

The potato crop was a good one, however. The spuds sold for $1 per bushel. Most of the potato crop was caught by a heavy frost and froze. Farmers pay 8 cents to have the spuds dug with a machine.

Mr. Von Berge thinks he will try his hand at raising spuds next year and if that crop fizzles he will quit farming and turn to something else.

JOHN P. WEHREN INJURED.

John P. Wehren met with quite a narrow escape from serious injury Tuesday morning when he was struck by an auto entering the garage he was in. Mr. Wehren had his back toward the door when he was struck and was knocked face downward onto the cement floor. The car passed over him, one of the wheels running over his right arm. He was quite badly bruised and cut but suffered no broken bones. A Hotchin boy was driving the car and it is thought failed to see Mr. Wehren in time to stop the car.

RED CROSS ASKS FOR VOLUNTEERS

Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand
Workers Needed to Conduct
Third Roll Call.

RECRUITING LISTS OPEN

Every Local Chapter Will Enlist Men and Women to Obtain Annual Memberships From November 2 to 11.

Two hundred and fifty thousand volunteer workers will be needed in the Central Division to conduct the third roll call of the American Red Cross, November 2 to 11.

An appeal is made from Central Division headquarters in Chicago calling upon the men and women of every community to enlist for the ten-day campaign to secure dollar annual memberships. With approximately 600 chapters in the division, this number will allow for about 400 workers to a chapter. Every chapter will be a recruiting office for these workers.

Workers Will Wear Badges. Each worker will be supplied with a badge proclaiming that the wearer is a volunteer worker for the Red Cross. The success of the campaign will, in reality rest upon the shoulders of these volunteer workers, as the third roll call cannot be a success without a complete organization.

The purpose of the campaign is to obtain, as nearly as possible, a universal enrollment in the Red Cross as an expression of confidence in the past performances of the Red Cross and a reaffirmation of allegiance to the principles which will guide its work in the future. In order to do this every man and woman in the territory of each chapter must be asked to join the Red Cross, and this will require the services of hundreds of workers. The Central Division wants at least 4,000,000 enrollments for 1920. Special stress during the campaign will be placed upon the annual one-dollar memberships in order to make the roll call an appeal to all the people.

Success has attended all Red Cross activities in the Central Division in the past. In the last war fund drive this division, with a quota of $13,800,000, subscribed $21,307,602.83. In the second roll call, more than 4,000,000 were enrolled.

The money quota for the Central Division is $3,000,000. Throughout the nation, the Red Cross will enlist 20,000,000 members and raise $15,000,000 to carry on its international, national and local work.

MOBILIZED FOR DISASTER CALLS

Red Cross Machinery of Organization Ready for Any Demand for Service.

50 BASE HOSPITALS READY

Chapters Provide Emergency Relief Committees and Establish Supply Centers to Answer Appeals.

Preparedness for disaster relief on a scale never before possible is being undertaken by the American Red Cross as one of the important features of its new peace program, in support of which a nationwide Third Roll Call will be conducted from Nov. 2 to 11 to obtain 20,000,000 members and $15,000,000.

Plan Survey of Supplies. Since 1900 disasters of peace have cost many thousands of lives and have brought personal injury or property loss to 1,500,000 persons, destroying property valued at $1,000,000,000. During 1917 eighty disasters were reported to the American Red Cross, 62 tornadoes, 5 floods, 4 great fires, two earthquakes, two serious mine disasters, two munition plant explosions and the tragic calamity which befell Halifax.

Under the direction of the Red Cross the entire resources of all communities will be mobilized for instant use when needed. Chapters everywhere will create committees to make surveys, locating emergency food supplies, drugs, hospital supplies, cots, mattresses, blankets, clothing, armor, schools and other buildings for housing refugees and will canvass physicians, nurses, social workers and others prepared to respond instantly to calls for their services in disasters.

National Resources Available. The thirteen divisional organizations will establish disaster relief supply centers and take charge of operations when assistance is needed. In cases of major disasters where the resources of the division in which it occurs are overtaxed, the entire strength of the Red Cross in the country may be mobilized through national headquarters.

Fifty base hospitals organized by the American Red Cross and turned over to the government for use with the military forces will be ready for immediate service.

NURSING CLASSES PLANNED BY RED CROSS CHAPTERS.

Classes in nursing the ill, conducted by trained nurses and open to every woman the local chapters as a part of the peace program outlined by that organization. The courses will include instruction in home sanitation, hygiene, care of the sick, and dietetics. These classes are being introduced in public schools and colleges and are offered to employees of department stores and factories, girl scouts, or anyone who desires to learn to prevent illness as far as possible, and to care for the patient when illness comes.

The work occupied nearly two years.

DRIVE FOR "BETTER SIRES—BETTER STOCK"

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The campaign which the United States department of agriculture, in co-operation with the state agricultural colleges and other agencies, will begin on October 1 against the scrub sire has created so much interest and has resulted in so many inquiries being received by the department that the following list of typical questions and answers has been prepared to in-

Southdown Ram, Two Years Old—First Prize and Champion. Form more fully concerning the drive for "Better Sires—Better Stock."

Question—Need a person keep all the classes of live stock in order to take part in the crusade?

Answer—By no means. He may keep only one class or several classes.

Question—If a person has no live stock but wishes to join the campaign, may he be enrolled?

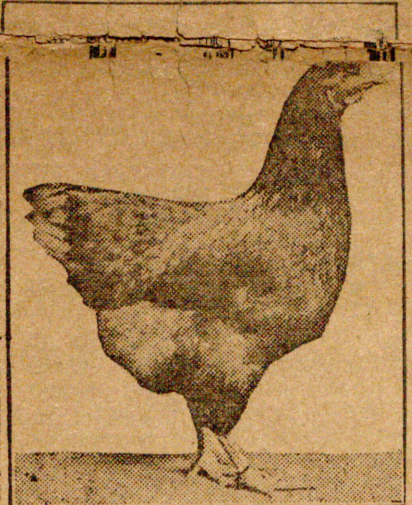

Answer—No; not until he becomes the owner of live stock. The person with even one breeding animal, however, is eligible. If a male, it must be a good pure-bred. If a female, it may be of any quality, but must be bred to a good pure-bred sire.

Don't Join Until Ready to Comply.

Question—If a person enrolls and then finds it too difficult to comply with the requirements, may he withdraw?

Answer—Yes; he may withdraw by returning the official emblem, with an explanation of the circumstances. But persons contemplating such a course are advised to defer enrollment until they can comply with the conditions.

Question—If a person has pure-bred sires in all classes of animals he raises to sell but intends to breed his work mares, for instance, to a scrub or grade stallion and to raise the colts for farm work, is he eligible to enrollment in the campaign?

Answer—No. Horses are included among the classes named and the mares must be bred to a pure-bred sire. (The classes are horses, cattle, sheep, swine, goats and poultry.)

Question—When poultry, for instance, are on range and a neighbor's inferior sires are with them, how is it possible to comply with the requirements?

Answer—The requirements are not violated unless chickens are raised from the eggs of hens sired by such males. It would be preferable, however, to induce the owner of the inferior roosters to dispose of them. In any case the breeding birds of a person enrolled in the campaign should be confined to his own premises, and other males fenced out during the breeding season.

Question—Who is to determine whether sires are of good quality as well as being pure-bred?

Answer—While the opinions of the owner and others who have examined the stock will be accepted, it is suggested that he consult also an experienced judge of live stock before filling out his enrollment blank. Sires which are diseased, undersized or otherwise inferior, even though pure-bred, should be avoided. Information on desirable types of live stock may be obtained from the department of agriculture.

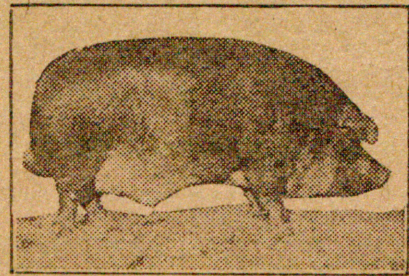

Sires Should Be Registered.

Question—Need pure-bred sires purchased be registered?

Answer—Pure-bred animals bought or sold preferably should be registered as a proof of pure breeding.

Question—If a person has a grade sire, a bull, for instance, of exceptionally good type and which resembles a pure-bred and he intends to get a registered pure-bred bull later, can he be enrolled in the campaign?

Answer—Not until he stops using the grade bull as a sire. It is suggested that he sell the grade bull, and, until he obtains a pure-bred bull of his own, breed his cows to a good pure-bred bull owned by some one else. In that case he would be eligible to enrollment.

Question—May children be enrolled and is there any age limit?

Answer—There is no age limit. Children who own live stock and who are able to sign their names and comply with the requirements may be enrolled. Children interested in live stock should be encouraged to enroll.

Briefly, a person must believe that the scrub rooster and the scrub boar are as objectionable, in principle, as the scrub bull. There must be clean sweep of inferior sires if the owner wishes Uncle Sam to officially enroll him in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" crusade. But the conditions are easily fulfilled by persons who, realizing the need for live stock improvement, are ready to put their beliefs into actual practice.

RAISE MORE FARM ANIMALS

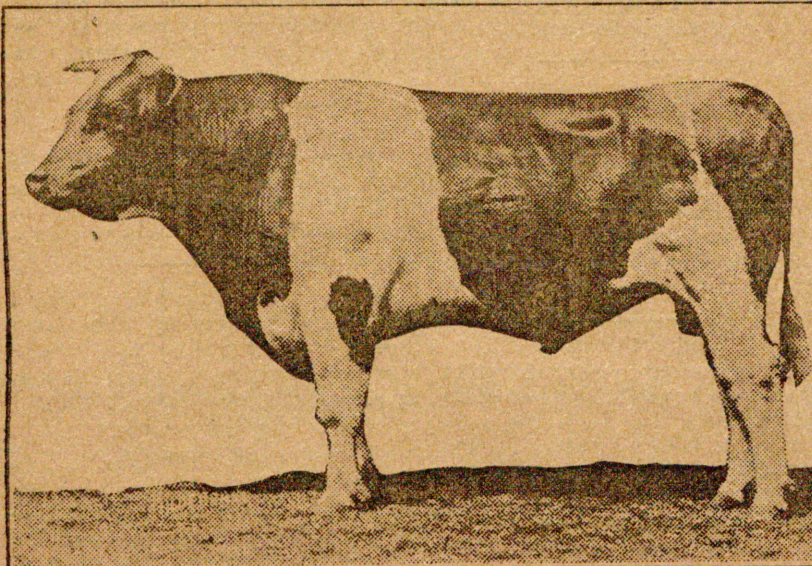

Less Expense Incurred in Marketing Food Crops and Providing Meat for Table Use.

More live stock on the farm means less expense in marketing food crops and less cost in providing animal products for the family table. Every farmer who raises live stock is helping provide foods at less cost of production.

TREATMENT OF COMB HONEY

Sometimes Found Necessary to Fumigate to Prevent Damage by Larvae of Wax Moth.

Some beekeepers find it necessary to fumigate comb honey to prevent damage by the larvae of the wax moth. For this purpose fumes of sulphur or disulphid of carbon may be used. If disulphid of carbon is used, great care should be taken not to bring it near a flame, as it is highly inflammable.

INJURY BY SCAB IN MANY STATES

Investigations in Progress to Learn More About Serious Disease of Wheat.

NO SATISFACTORY CONTROL

Best Obtainable Seed Should Be Used and Thoroughly Cleaned and Treated by Formaldehyde Method—Clean Up Waste Places.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Investigations are in progress by the United States department of agriculture, in co-operation with a number of state experiment stations and individual farmers, to learn more about wheat scab and methods of controlling it.

No entirely satisfactory control of this disease has been developed, because the scab fungi develop on so many different kinds of grains and grasses and on cornstalks, stubble, straw and other trash. Two things, however, are regarded as important. First, the best wheat obtainable should be used for seed. This should be thoroughly cleaned and treated by the formaldehyde method recommended for the prevention of smut. Second, this wheat should be sown on thoroughly plowed land—land where the old cornstalks, wheat stubble and grass straw have been entirely plowed under. This can be accomplished by use of a drag chain. All grass and straw should be burned or otherwise removed from hedges, fence rows, fence corners and nearby waste places. These waste places should be either plowed or burned off.

Wheat Scab Takes Heavy Toll.

Winter wheat everywhere east of the Great Plains was heavily infected with scab this year. Spring wheat also suffered greatly and many spring wheat fields were left uncut, due chiefly to the ravages of scab. The states suffering the greatest losses of both spring and winter wheat include Missouri, Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee.

This disease of wheat is caused by several different fungi which attack the crop at various stages of development. The seedlings are blighted, the roots rotted and the plants weakened to such an extent that they are winter-killed. The heads are blighted, the diseased parts die and prevent the formation of well-filled kernels. The head blight is the most evident and in most cases causes the most damage. Wheat from fields with only a moderate scab infection is light in weight and, therefore, grades as No. 3 or lower. The farmer, then, not only loses from a reduction in yield, but from a lowering of the grade as well.

Scab Fungus Attacks Corn.

Of those fungi known to cause scab in wheat the most important one also attacks corn. One of the ways it lives over winter is on the decaying cornstalks left on the ground in the fields. Wheat is often sown on the corn land with these cornstalks left on the surface. The following season the fungus spreads from the infected cornstalks to the wheat heads and causes blighting.

In addition to wheat and corn, the disease attacks rye, oats, barley and many grasses. The scab fungi also live over winter on the infected stubble and decaying straw left on top of the ground, and on infected grass stems left around the edges of the field. These fungi spread from this material to the next season's crop.

Prevent Winter Killing.

It is a common practice in some sections of the winter wheat belt to spread straw on the winter wheat after the ground is frozen, in order to hold the snow. Clean straw from winter wheat spread on the fields late in the winter, after the ground is frozen, is not dangerous in spreading scab to the next year's crop. This straw holds the snow and moisture and prevents the plants from being broken by the wind. When plowed under the next summer it adds humus to the soil. Turn the stock into the straw piles from the badly diseased wheat and spread the manure on the ground the following year. Such straw should never be spread on the fields, for it is sure to carry scab into next year's crop.

GIVE CLOVER YIELD GOOD CARE IN FALL

Desirable That Stands Have Every Chance to Come Through.

In Many Sections Application of Lime Will Benefit Crop—Farmers Will Find It Profitable to Make Best Preparation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Both red and alsike clover seed were harvested and largely threshed early in October. The fields seeded this spring are the ones from which clover hay and clover seed will be taken next year.

One of the facts that clover seed growers desire to be considered is that the seed should be in good shape, say specialists in the states relations service. A light top dressing with manure, where this can be done, will be helpful, and will be best applied after freezing weather sets in. The young plants should not be pastured too close, nor should they be allowed to bloom and make seed. If the plants come into bloom, they should be clipped early. A height of four to six inches, just before going into the winter, is the most favorable condition.

The preparation of the land on which red clover is to be seeded next spring should be considered this fall. In most parts of Iowa and Illinois, the application of lime will benefit red clover. On some lands it is absolutely essential for a good stand. Lime is best applied when the land is being prepared for wheat. An application of two tons of fine-ground limestone is commonly enough, although on badly run-down land or on land known to be very sour, three tons per acre may be applied with profit. Clover also needs phosphates, and 200 to 250 pounds per acre should be drilled in with the wheat. Both wheat and clover will benefit.

Red clover seed is likely to remain high-priced for a year or two at least, and farmers will find it profitable to devote all the care necessary to preparing their land so as to give the clover crop every possible chance.

PLANT HARDWOOD TREE SEED

Mulch Around Young Trees Will Furnish Ample Protection From Severe Winter Weather.

In raising hardwoods from seeds, species having soft, unprotected seeds, such as elms and soft maples, should be planted as soon as the seeds fall. The hard, nutlike seeds from such trees as oaks, hickories, walnuts, butternuts, should be gathered in the fall, buried either in sand in the cellar or in well-drained sandy soil outside, and planted in the spring just as soon as they are taken out of the sand.

The seeds can be planted in garden rows, spacing the seeds about six inches apart, or with a dibble the nuts can be planted in specially prepared spots where the trees are to remain. Soft, delicate seeds, like the elm, however, should be planted in the garden and transplanted after they are two years old.

Young trees should be trimmed from the start, in order to give the best growth and shape.

GRADE CHOICE ALFALFA HAY

Few Bales of Inferior Quality Will Spoil Appearance of Carload of Superior Article.

In selling alfalfa hay it is absolutely necessary that a high standard of grading be maintained, for a few bales of an inferior quality will spoil the appearance of a carload of choice hay. Soft, ill-shaped bales, even if the quality is all right, should be put aside, for they will probably come apart in unloading, causing loss and trouble for your customer.

Needed Supply of Humus.

By turning under stalks, weeds and other vegetation you will be contributing to the needed supply of humus in old fields.

The sow that takes plenty of exercise freely is the one that is most likely to make a desirable brood sow.

The first step toward improving unproductive pastures should be the destruction of weeds.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around and in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZ, 603 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultz's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

FRECKLES

Scratch as Cats Can. Two cats were about to have a duel. "Let us have an understanding before we begin," said one. "About what?" asked the other. "Is it to be a duel to the death, or out of five?"—Boys' Life.

When it comes to adversity or prosperity, the average man prefers ruin by the latter route.

MOTHERS SHOULD HEED THIS ADVICE

Rock Island, Ill.—"I can highly recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to women in need of a special tonic. I was very frail and delicate the first two years of my married life, and it was Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription that restored me to health and strength."—Mrs. S. A. Smith, 2408 Sixth Ave.

Quincy, Ill.—"When I felt that I needed a tonic, I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was simply tired out and didn't feel good. I just felt that I must have a tonic which was good for women. I took about two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and it made me feel much better. I shall always praise it because it helped me."—Mrs. Julia Curtis, 524 N. Fifth St.

Weak or Nervous

Elgin, Ill.—"I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all women who are run-down, weak or nervous. It is a splendid tonic, as I know by my own personal experience, and I would never hesitate to recommend it to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in preference to all other medicines."—Zerneck, 159 Kimball St.

Joliet, Ill.—"From the time my children were small I have been recommending Dr. Pierce's Cough Syrup. The fact that it contains neither opiates nor harmful drugs, combined with the prompt relief it gives little folks when they become choked up with coughs and colds, is my reason for recommending it so highly. I would not give any other cough syrup to my children."—Mrs. Regina Russell, 750 S. Ottawa St.

HEALS RUNNING SORES

"I feel it my duty to write you a letter of thanks for your wonderful Peterson's Ointment. I had a running sore on my left leg for one year. I began to use Peterson's Ointment three weeks ago and now it is healed."—A. C. Gilbrath, 703 Reed St., Erie, Pa. For years I have been selling through druggists a large box of PETERSON'S OINTMENT for 35 cents. The healing power in this ointment is marvelous. Eczema goes in a few days. Old sores heal up like magic; piles that other remedies do not seem to even relieve are speedily conquered. Pimples and nasty blackheads disappear in a week and the distress of chafing goes in a few minutes. Mail orders filled. Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

MOKENA.

Mrs. J. Schick, who has been spending the summer at her old home here, left Monday for Chicago where she will spend the winter with her son Jacob.

Mokena

Arthur G. Zumstein, who has been with the American forces in Siberia, returned home Thursday after being away over a year. He looks well and is glad to be home again. He is the last Mokena boy to return from the army. He left Siberia with his company in August. There were many delays in getting a ship for home. The voyage was a long and tedious one and consumed much time. About two weeks ago he landed in San Francisco. He says the country where he was is not thickly populated and there is much wild open country. He has many graphic stories to tell of the far northern country and has seen many wonderful sights. Mr. Zumstein was connected with the medical department while in the service.

Mr. and Mrs. V. H. Scheer move this week to their new home in Tinley Park.

Building operations on the new residences of Mrs. George Barenz and Ehrardt Oswald, Jr., are progressing rapidly. These dwellings will be ready for occupancy soon.

MOTOR BURNS OUT.

The village water department was put out of commission Friday night when the large motor driving the pump was burned out, due to low voltage. This is the fourth time motors have been burned out at the station from the same cause. A supposed safety switch was recently installed to make such a recurrence impossible, but the switch failed to work. The motor is completely ruined. A gasoline engine was hooked up Saturday and is now used in operating the pump.

The village board met Wednesday night in monthly session. Only the regular routine business was transacted.

DAIRYMEN HAPPY.

Dairymen throughout this section are jubilant over the fact that the officers of the Milk Producers' association, who were on trial before State Attorney Hoyne in Chicago for alleged illegal conspiracy, were acquitted on the jury Wednesday. This has been long and bitter fight for the farmers.

CLASS MEETING TUESDAY

The C. I. C. class of the Methodist Sunday school will be entertained at the home of Miss Mildred Backer next Tuesday evening. This will be the regular monthly meeting.

SALES STARTING.

The auction sale season is opening this month. Herbert Moriarty has been engaged as auctioneer for the sale of Commissioner Fred Marti, who will conduct a public sale on November 15. Commissioner Marti is going to retire from farming and will settle in Frankfort, having purchased the late Moses Balchowsky home some time ago.

Carl Krapp, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Silver Cross hospital last Monday, is improving nicely.

Mrs. Henry Voss returned the past week from a visit with the Julius Mavis family at Kenesaw, Neb.

MUST HAVE TRAPPING LICENSES

Inquiries have been made of the village clerk relative to the necessity of having a trapper's license. Upon taking the matter up the village clerk's office finds that the revised game law effective this year makes it absolutely necessary that anyone trapping fur-bearing animals, etc., must have a trapper's license, the fee of which is $1. The village clerk has placed a requisition with the game commission at Springfield for a supply of these licenses.

GAME CUTS H. C. L.

An unprecedented rush for hunting licenses is reported by the village clerk's office. Hunters say that game is cutting down the high cost of living to a considerable extent. A good fat rabbit is worth a dollar and better. Shells are quite expensive and every shot must be made to count in order to make hunting a paying proposition.

TO DIRECT BAZAAR.

The Immanuel Lutheran church will direct a bazaar and supper at the church parlors the afternoon and evening of November 20.

BUYS BARENZ FARM.

Louis Lauffer purchased the George Barenz farm, which was sold at auction last week by Conrad Bettenhausen, the administrator of the estate. The consideration was $147 per acre. Mr. Lauffer has rented the farm to his brother Emil.

The dance directed Friday night by the Frankfort Royal Neighbors at the Frankfort hall, was largely attended. The hall was prettily decorated in keeping with the Halloween season. Fortunes were told and other Halloween stunts were carried out.

HANSON-SCHMIDT-VOLLRATH
NUPTIALS.

A quiet home wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening at six o'clock, when Mrs. Lydia Hanson Schmidt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hanson, and Edward Vollrath were united in marriage. Rev. G. Lambrecht, pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical church, performed the ceremony, which was witnessed only by the immediate families. Mr. Hank of Honer, aged eighty-six years, the grandfather of the groom, was also present to witness the ceremony.

Mr. Vollrath conducted a barbershop in Frankfort a few years ago and later served in the United States army. The home for the present will be made with the bride's parents.

MISS KOHLHAGEN STRICKEN.

Miss Olive Kohlhausen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Kohlhausen, was stricken the later part of the week with an attack of spinal meningitis and has been seriously ill. A trained nurse is in attendance. She is slightly improved. Miss Kohlhausen had been attending school in Englewood, when she was taken ill.

The monthly Kaffee Kranz of the St. Peter's Evangelical church, was held at the church parlors Thursday. There was a good attendance and the receipts totaled about $40.

BAZAAR NOV. 13.

The Ladies Aid society of the St. Peter's Evangelical church is busily engaged preparing for their annual bazaar to be held at the church parlors the afternoon and evening of November 13. A supper will also be held in connection with the bazaar.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Klepper returned Tuesday from Excelsior Springs, Mo., where Mr. Klepper took the baths for the benefit of his health.
